Russian Outposts Near at Hand.

In the Behring straits Russia and America shake hands. Big Diomedes island and Little Diomedes stand side by side, the former Russia's outpost, the other our own. A little strip of narrow sea lies between the two, and so clear is the air on a fair day that it seems as if from one island you could easily reach across a hand to the other. North, across Kotzebue sound, is Point Hope, a barren sand spit, extending far into the Arctic sea. It is the home of a tribe of Eskimos, who go to the mission school and church and learn to sing hymns, to speak a little English and to use soap.

Safe to Ship Wet Coal.

It has long been considered highly dangerous on account of the danger of spontaneous combustion to ship coal for sea transportation in a wet condition. Experiments have now been made which show that after all this is quite the safest condition in which to ship it.

The expressions of grateful women who have experienced the wonderful blessings of Rocky Mountain Tea, compensates us for our efforts in their behalf. Ask your druggist.

A YANKEE SEA KING.

CAPTAIN SLOCUM SAILED AROUND THE WORLD IN A SLOOP.

The Bold Navigator and His Famous Craft, the Spray, Will Be at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo Next Summer.

The nautical adventures of the Vikings of old, which have been celebrated in song and story, are overshadowed in importance by the remarkable voyage of Captain Joshua Slocum around the world in a sloop 36 feet 9 inches in length over all and nine tons net burden. The solitary Yankee sea king cruised 46,000 miles on all the oceans, ten times the distance ever claimed for a Viking ship. It was the first and only successful attempt to circumnavigate the globe alone in a small boat. The extraordinary character of the voyage can only be gauged by those who have devoted their lives to sailing the seas and know their varying moods, and they one and all regard it as a most remarkable exploit.

Captain Slocum and the boat in which he made his around the world voyage will be at the Pan-American Exposition next summer. The craft will ride upon the waters of the beautiful Park Lake, where it may be viewed or boarded by Exposition visitors. That it will prove to be a great attraction goes without saying.

The intrepid Yankee globe cirler is a slender man, not above the medium height and is somewhat bald, but there is little gray in the fringe of surviving hair or in his full beard. He has blue eyes, which are frank and direct. He possesses a dry humor which is very amusing. That he is daring and plucky is attested by his long and solitary trip.

The boat in which Captain Slocum made his voyage is named the Spray. It was originally a fishing boat, supposed to be a century old, and when it came into Captain Slocum's possession was in process of decay. Unaided, he rebuilt it upon the original lines, and the splendid manner in which it behaved on the long tour is sufficient evidence that he builded well.

Captain Slocum sailed from Boston on April 24, 1895, and his voyage consumed 3 years and 2 months, coming to a close during the Spanish-American war. In lieu of a chronometer he had an old tin clock, but he was rarely at fault in his longitude. The voyage was attended with many unusual incidents. The first occurred after the Spray had left her first port of call, the Azores. The Captain had eaten freely of plums and a native cheese, and they did not agree with him. He was attacked with stomachic cramps. He double reefed the mainsail and with a full jib put the sloop on her course, lashed the wheel and went below to the cabin, where he rolled in agony on the floor. Becoming delirious, he imagined that a strange man came on board, announced himself as "one of Columbus' crew" and guided the craft. A blow came up, and the Spray ran like a deer. When the Captain regained his full senses and was able to go on deck, she was holding true to her course. She had made 90 miles during the night in the rough sea.

The Spray went through the very dangerous Straits of Magellan, whose shores are strewn with wrecks and inhabited by pirates, without accident, but after weeks consumed in the passage was driven by a furious gale southward and thence eastward around Cape Horn, necessitating a second passage of the Straits.

Captain Slocum was received at every landing place with the most cordial hospitality, for his name was known the world around among seafaring men, and the cable news of his progress went before him. In Samoa Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson visited him. In Tasmania Lord Hampden was a caller. At the Cape Sir Alfred Milner saw him. A pass over the Cape railways permitted the skipper to pay his respects to President Kruger of the Boer Republic. While he was cruising the Spanish-American war broke out, and his first intimation of the fact was gleaned from the United States cruiser Oregon, which signaled, "Are there any Spanish men-of-war about?" Captain Slocum knew of none being in that locality. He diplomatically replied, "No, but let us keep together for mutual protection?"

It was on June 27, 1895, that the Spray cast anchor at the moorings she had left on her voyage around the globe.

To see the skipper and the craft of globe circling celebrity will be a treat which all Exposition visitors will want to enjoy.

It is promised that this season's company is a little ahead of any with which the piece has ever been given. Little Chip, that famous eccentric comedian, of whom we have all heard so much, has been specially engaged for the part of "The Private."

CHEAPER THAN THE GRAVE.

Cremation in Japan is an Exceedingly Inexpensive Process, Says This Account.

The advance of cremation in England, shown by the establishment of a municipal furnace in the north and the projection of a new crematorium not far outside the four-mile radius in London, recalls the interesting history of Japan in the matter. Cremation followed Buddhism into Japan about 1,200 years ago, but it only partially superseded the Shinto custom of disposing of the dead by interment. In 1873 cremation was totally prohibited by the Japanese government, whose members seem to have had some confused notion as to the practice being un-European, and therefore barbarous.

Having discovered that, far from being un-European, cremation was the goal of European reformers in such matters, they rescinded their prohibition before two years had elapsed. Cremation in Japan is carried out in a somewhat rough and ready manner. The cheapest process costs about $1.12. This is scarcely adapted to western requirements and is sufficiently derided by the title which the foreign residents of a certain settlement in Japan gave to the native cremation ground, among the hills—"Roast Meat valley."
